1ST CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

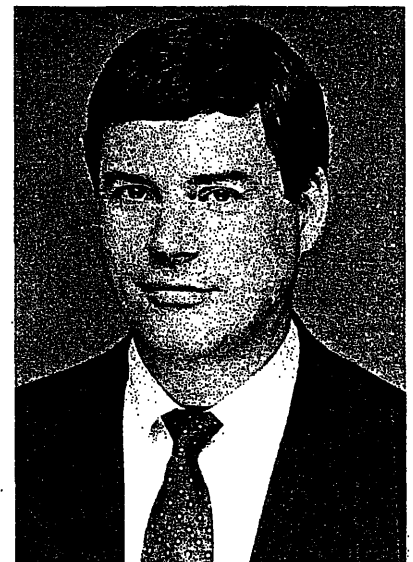

Westfall & McCullough endorse Charlie Dooley for Congress

St. Louis County Executive
Buzz Westfall

Right from the start, two of Charlie Dooley's most enthusiastic supporters have been Buzz Westfall and Bob McCullough. Both men have known Charlie and worked with him for years. Likewise, both men have been working hard to help him get elected to Congress.

In August when Charlie declared his candidacy, Buzz Westfall immediately announced his endorsement and publicly declared his

"enthusiastic support" for Charlie and noted that Charlie had "dedicated nearly his entire adult life to public service." Buzz and Charlie have worked very closely together ever since Charlie was elected to the County Council. "Buzz and I have a great relationship because we share the same concerns and priorities for our region," Dooley says, "We're both staunchly pro-labor, tough on crime, and dedicated to economic development and jobs for our constituents."

McCullough, the veteran prosecutor and one of the top vote-getters in the region says, "I talked to Charlie a long time ago and told him he would make a terrific congressman and if he decided to run to let me know. I will do whatever I can for him."

Both McCullough and Westfall have held fundraisers for Charlie and promise to continue their active support to ensure a Dooley victory in the August primary.

Former Congressman
Robert A. Young

Two members of one of North County's most prominent political families gave a big boost to County Councilman Charlie Dooley's bid for Congress last month. Former Congressman Robert A. Young and his son County Councilman Robert Young, IV endorsed Dooley as the best choice for working families during a news conference at the County Government Center in Clayton. Both father and son are Pipefitters by trade and longtime union members.

"I know what it takes to be effective in Congress and bring resources back to St. Louis and Charlie's got what it takes," says former Congressman Young who is known for bringing federal dollars and jobs back to St. Louis for projects like MetroLink, and the construction of I-170. "Charlie's 23 of years experience as an elected official right here at home has prepared him to go to Washington and get the resources St. Louis needs to grow and prosper in the years to come."

"There's no generation gap between my Dad and me when it comes to understanding who's the best candidate in the 1st Congressional District," says Councilman Robert Young, IV. "Charlie knows what's important for working families and he'll fight for those things in Washington: education, jobs, preserving neighborhoods and economic development. He knows the challenges our family's face; he knows their concerns. I've worked side by side with Charlie on the Council. He's a genuine leader who is respected by his colleagues regardless of party and he knows how to get things done. Both of us are enthusiastic about Charlie's campaign and we're going to work hard to get him elected."

"It's time for change, not more of the same," Dooley says, "We need new leadership if we're going to maintain our quality of life, our jobs, and our communities in the new century. I will fight for a future where businesses are bringing jobs into our communities instead of abandoning them. There's a whole new economy developing and we can't let our kids be left behind. We need to make sure today's workers have the training they need to remain competitive and continue working at good paying jobs. I'm going to be a 'hands on' Congressman who looks out for labor and encourages the growth of businesses that provide jobs with good pay and benefits so workers can support their families and buy their own homes."

Charlie Dooley

To my labor friends:

Soon you will be making a decision about supporting a candidate for Congress in the 1st District. I am asking for your consideration and endorsement. I have an established record of support for organized labor. My 23 years as an elected official have prepared me for the job of representing the working people of the 1st Congressional District.

One of the most important things I've learned as a public official is the importance of being accessible to the people you represent. I will always remain accessible, I will always make it a priority to come home and make myself available to everyone in the community: no matter how long I may serve in Washington. Nothing is more important than responding to the needs of the community and you can't do that if you don't come back home, spend time with people, and listen as often as possible. Sometimes the most important thing a public official can do is listen.

As a member of Congress I will not only fight for legislation that labor seeks in Washington, but I will also concentrate on bringing the resources back home to spur investment in our neighborhoods, economic development in our community, and to bring good paying jobs for working people right here in metropolitan St. Louis.

I recently retired from McDonnell Douglas (now Boeing) after 30 years of service. I punched a clock every day just as your members do. So when I talk about the needs and concerns of working families I speak from firsthand experience. With my wife Sandra, a longtime UAW member who works everyday on the line at the GM plant in Wentzville, I share your priorities and your values because we are one of those working families. With your help, I will take those values to Washington and I will fight for those priorities.

Sincerely,

Charlie Dooley
